Brodick Bay is on the eastern coast of the Isle of Arran. It includes the most picturesque part of the island, so beautiful, in fact, as to be termed the paradise of Arran, and is naturally a much-visited place. Overlooking its shores is the lofty peak of Goatfell or Gaoth-chein, that is, the windy mountain. It is 2,866 feet high, and the five hours' climb to the summit will reward the tourist with a most magnificent view.
